Welcome to the 2022 Berkshire Grown Guide to Local Food & Farms

Each time you buy directly from a local farmer, not only do you eat the freshest, most delicious foods and farm products, you also support local agriculture as a vital part of the Berkshire community.

Our local farmers feed us and they steward the soils that grow our food — they are friends and neighbors — you wave to each other as you pass on the roads and you buy your food from them at farmers markets, farm stands and local grocery stores and through CSA shares.

To keep our food web strong, Berkshire Grown supports local food and farms in a myriad of ways:

- Our Share the Bounty program purchased 93 CSA shares from 22 farms and donated them to 18 food access programs across the Berkshire-Taconic region;
- To further strengthen local farm businesses and their connections to community members of all income levels, our Farm to Food Access program purchases local crops in bulk quantities and distributes them to local food pantries. In 2021 we delivered over 22,000 pounds of storage crops for winter, 17,000 pounds of meat, along with fresh local fruits, seasonal greens, cucumbers, peppers, squash, and tomatoes, and 3,234 dozen eggs!
- For the 10th year in a row, Berkshire Grown's monthly indoor Winter Farmers Markets put cash directly into the pockets of farmers during the lean winter months;
- We supported farmers with workshops and technical assistance that helped grow their businesses and sustain the land they farm;
- Berkshire Grown staff advocated for local and state policies that strengthen local agriculture and protect our Berkshire farmland.

This 2022 Guide to Local Food and Farms is the region's most comprehensive guide to local farms, farmers markets, and restaurants offering local foods — use it to find farm stands, CSA farms, pick-your-own farms and orchards, as well as locally sourced value-added products like charcuterie, preserves, and fermented foods, and locations and hours of food pantries spread across the county. Within these pages and online at BerkshireGrown.org/Find-Food-and-Farms, you will find descriptions, addresses, and a detailed map.

Keep this Guide to Local Food and Farms handy and use it frequently! We feel deep gratitude to all of you who have contributed generously to Berkshire Grown. Thank you for helping us to Keep Farmers Farming!
